

NACCHO Requests Information on Future State or Regional Preparedness Meetings and Conferences

NACCHO, in coordination with the CDC Radiation Studies Section, is seeking information on upcoming state and/or regional preparedness meetings or conferences to identify potential sites to host a technical assistance and capacity building workshop on radiation preparedness. The workshop will be designed to provide health department attendees and other relevant stakeholders with an understanding on foundational radiation preparedness concepts, terminology, and how health departments across the country should be completing radiation preparedness activities. It will also assist workshop attendees with developing strategies to move radiation planning forward in their jurisdictions. The length and specific topics covered in the workshop are flexible and able to be tailored to needs of the attendees. If your state, regional, or local health department is interested in hosting a workshop at an upcoming meeting/conference, please contact Alex Harris at aharris@naccho.org by November 9, 2018.

First preference will be given to those that respond by November 9, 2018, but NACCHO will continue to accept information after that date.

For more information on eligibility criteria, visit the NACCHO Preparedness Brief Blog.